The crystal pattern will always be present in the background with a light opacity, the opacity level might be multiply, and its intensity will vary depending on the printing material, but the crystal pattern will be always in the background.

Using a deep forest green for the "seed" portion and a golden yellow for the logo can create a beautiful "growth" gradient that leads the eye naturally across the logo.

It should be noted that the color gradient or gradient shades of green should be considered, transitioning from dark to light green, and this gradient should be used in both the logo and the package design.

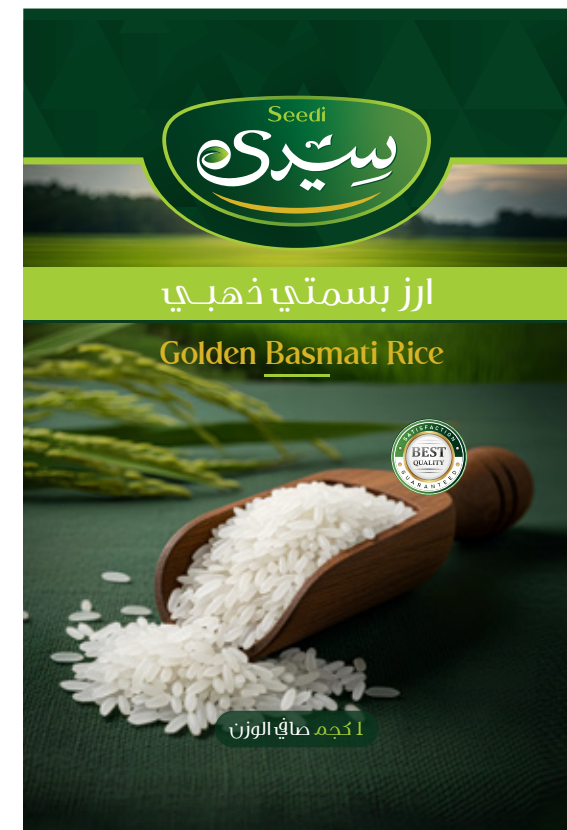

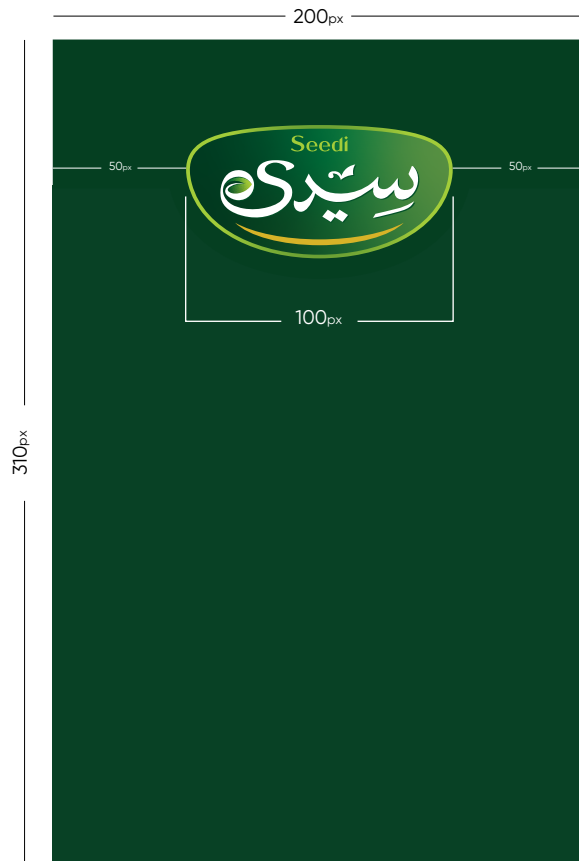

BRAND APPLICATION

3.1 Package Applications

These are approximate measurements, not actual sizes, however, if the width of the package is 200px, the logo should be 100px.

Having a thin border around the logo, and to fix the positions of the icon and text.

This is the final design after adding the image, text, and the icons.

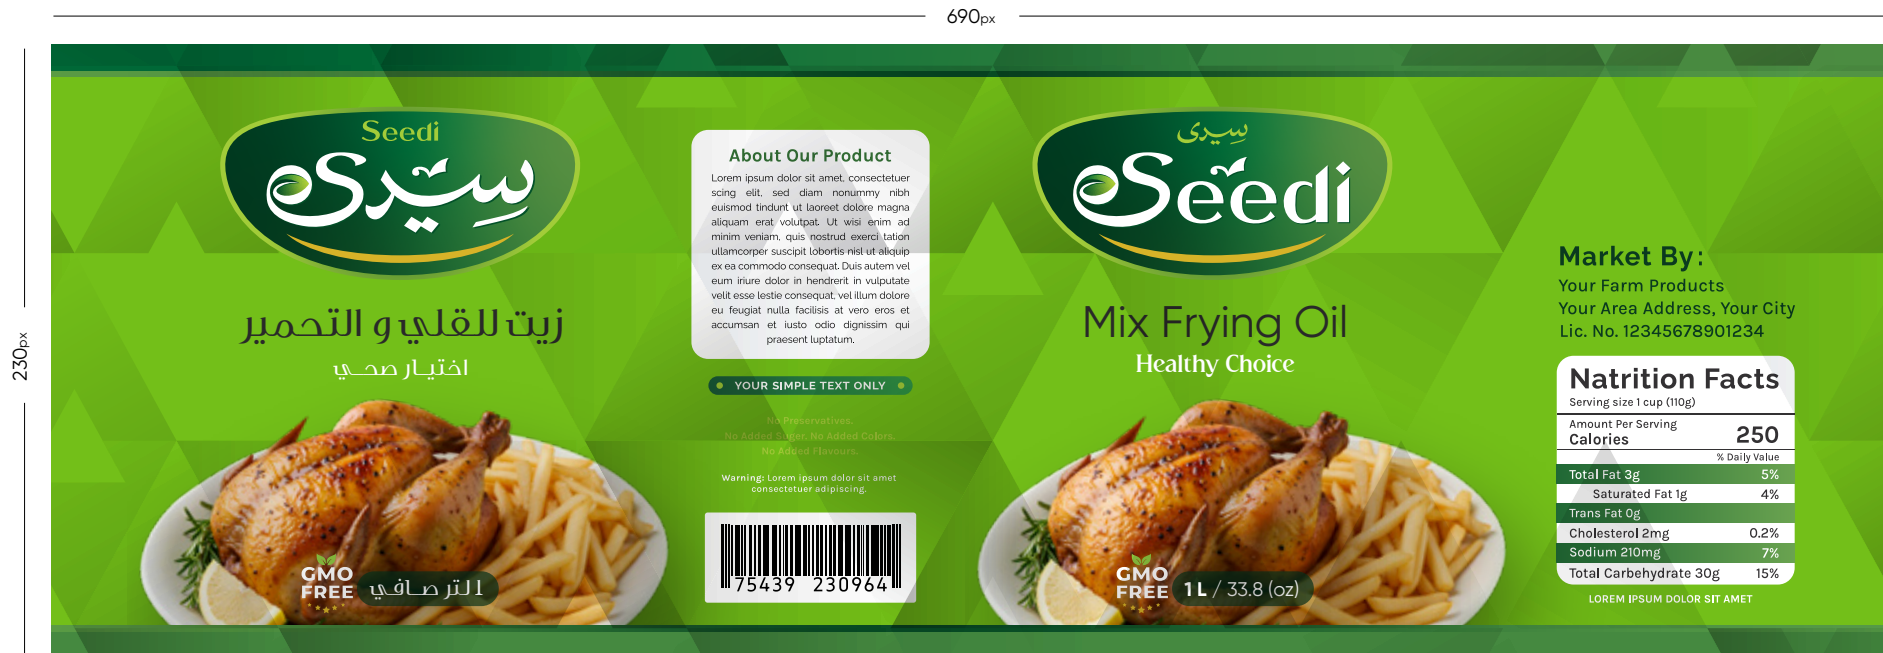

In horizontal labels, the logo typically takes up approximately one-fifth of the space, keeping in mind that the logo will be repeated with the english logo on the front and the arabic logo on the back.

It must be considered that the design is symmetric between the english and arabic, and the distribution of text in this manner.

It is possible to change the color, while maintaining the background, image, text, and the logo in the same style and placement.
